

Book Studies

Be Informed | Be Connected | Be the Change

The CRUE Center is pleased to provide independent learning opportunities for individuals interested in expanding their knowledge, understanding, and practices related to culturally responsive pedagogy and practices, and the role of race, class, and culture in classrooms. These courses are all one credit intensive book studies and will be offered through the Office of Continuing Education at the University of Colorado Denver. While you can do the book study independently, on your own time, we also encourage you to gather some colleagues together to study the book together and expand your learning experience. The book study program is designed for K-12 educators who are seeking graduate level courses for their professional development, license renewal and/or pay scale increases. You will be able to choose from a number of highly influential books from the list below.

Course expectations include reflections on each chapter of the book, participation in online threaded discussions, and a final four to five page paper on your overall impressions of the book.

Each one-CEU credit, graduate-level course costs $75 and is graded at the Pass/Fail level.
