

Let's Grow, Together

About Us

Growing Self Counseling and Coaching is a vibrant, positive, collaborative private practice setting in which we see motivated, high-functioning clients who primarily present seeking help with their relationships, a desire to make positive changes in their lives or careers, or with mild mental health concerns such as anxiety and depression.

We specialize in effective, evidence-based couples counseling and relationship coaching and primarily see couples seeking to improve their communication, restore trust, and solve problems together. Many of our clients are interested in life coaching and personal growth work. Some are dealing with life transitions, often related to relationships (divorce, breakups, or dating). All our clients value a positive, evidence-based approach.

We have a sub-specialty in career counseling and work with many individuals who hope to find the right career, or continue to grow and expand professionally.

We are seeking to contract with a new career coach, as well as a skilled marriage counselor / couples therapist. Our ideal candidate would be available to meet with Growing Self clients in person at one or more of our Denver Metro locations (central Denver, Broomfield, and DTC), as well as through online video.

We Support Happy, Healthy Helpers

In addition to our dedication to providing a supportive, transformative environment for our counseling and coaching clients, Growing Self is just as committed to supporting talented, passionate counselors and coaches in excelling at the work they love. Our contractors get the benefit of our marketing, billing, insurance submissions and administration systems. We connect you with a steady stream of great clients, help you build your ideal caseload, and assist you in creating your optimum work / life balance. As part of our supportive group, you are free to focus on the meaningful, satisfying work that you do best.

We're also here to support your professional development and buffer you from the isolation that many private practitioners struggle with. When you become part of our vibrant, collaborative community you will have access to excellent supervision and/or peer consultation, supportive consultation groups, advanced clinical training opportunities, coaching around how to expand and retain your caseload, access to proprietary training materials, and the opportunity to develop supportive working relationships with a diversely talented team.

Part Time Hours, Full-Time Pay

Our compensation is generous and based on your education, years of experience, licensure, specialties and certifications. Our contractors generally build robust caseloads quickly, and have enormous earning potential -- well above the national average salary for helping professions. Best yet, our contractors typically earn more than what they would in a full-time position seeing clients a just a few days a week.

Our contract positions allow you to create your own schedule and take unlimited time off. This empowers you to have flexibility in your schedule, be there for your family, practice good self-care, and create the work / life balance that is so critical for anyone in the helping professions.

We are all about showing up authentically and generously for our clients, and have the same attitude towards our colleagues. Our goal is for you to love this group as much as we do, and feel valued, appreciated, and excited about practicing your craft every day.

About The Position

We are seeking to connect with talented career coaches and couples counselors who have specialized training and experience in the core services we provide to our clients: Marriage Counseling, Couples Therapy, and Career Counseling.

We would prefer to partner with practitioners that are available to grow their caseload to "full time" with us (approximately 16-24 clients per week), who are available to meet with clients in-person, as well as online, and who would like to establish a positive, long-term partnership with our group.

Flexible Hours: You create your own schedule within available hours at your own private office and from home if working with clients online. Our ideal candidate would be able to accommodate the scheduling preferences of our professional clients and be open to offering some evening and weekend availability as well as daytime hours.

Professional Qualifications:

We bring our clients meaningful, valuable help by providing excellent, ethical, and compassionate care from highly educated, well-trained experts who practice evidence-based forms of counseling and coaching. To ensure that our clients receive the best, we partner with practitioners who have:

- A Master's or Doctoral degree in Marriage and Family Therapy / specialization, Career Development / specialization or a related field, from a CACREP, COAMAFTE or APA accredited university.
- Licensure to practice in your state of residence (LMFT preferred), or eligible for state licensure if pre-licensed.
- In addition to competence with couples, also possess general practitioner abilities to assess and effectively help clients with a wide variety of presenting concerns such as anxiety, depression, ADHD, (mild) trauma, life transitions, relationship issues, and grief and loss.

- Technologically savvy, and competence with electronic record keeping and scheduling systems, and online communication platforms
- Excellent relationship building skills, professionalism with clients and colleagues, strong written and verbal communication skills, organizational skills, and responsiveness to team members and clients.
- Commitment to personal growth and professional development opportunities.
- Ability to work independently, and also seek support and consultation when needed.
- Access to your own laptop and high-speed internet when working from home.
- Commitment to contributing to our online community through writing articles for our blog, and through social media.
- Coach training and / or certification is a plus.

If interested please submit your current resume or CV and cover letter to our clinical director, Dr. Lisa Marie Bobby: hello@growingself.com.
